

Canadian High School Codes

Secondary schools (high schools) in Canada do not need to go through the NCAA Eligibility Center review process to establish a list of core courses or obtain a high school code. They also do not have a College Board (CEEB) code.

Each province in Canada has its own Ministry of Education provincial list, which is maintained by the NCAA Eligibility Center's academic certification staff. These provinces receive an NCAA Eligibility Center code. Individual Canadian high schools do not have their own lists of NCAA core courses. The NCAA Eligibility center uses the provincial lists to certify courses for college-bound student-athletes from Canada.
