UCLA snags third national title; LSU freshman Ernst rides first hole-in-one to individual honors: UCLA won its third Division I women's golf national championship May 21, defeating defending national champion Purdue by four shots as darkness fell at Traditions Club in Bryan, Texas.

LSU freshman Austin Ernst won the individual title, finishing at 7-under-par for the championship after posting a second 66 during a final round that included a hole-in-one on the par-3 second hole.

Ernst is the first freshman to win the Division I individual title since Southern California's Jennifer Rosales did it in 1998.

For all of the contending teams, the last day of the May 18-21 competition was a very long day. UCLA, Purdue and LSU each had to finish their third-round play during the morning of the final day after play from the third day was suspended due to darkness. Then they had to return for fourth-round play late in the afternoon.

UCLA began the final round with a seven-shot advantage on Purdue. Slowly, the Boilermakers chipped away at the lead, taking the top spot by a stroke as the final group played the 13th hole. In the end, however, it was the Bruins who pulled away in the closing moments, getting nothing worse than a par from any of their players over the closing four holes.

Stephanie Kono and senior Glory Yang each birdied the 18th hole.

By day's end, a teary UCLA head coach Carrie Forsyth was drained.

"It was pretty intense out there," she said. "We were not playing very well for a while, then it got a little too close for comfort for a little while, but we came back and made some birdies.

"It was awesome, but I've got more gray hairs than I did when we started this day, that's for sure. At the end of the year, this is the one that everybody wants to win."

The final margin may well have been closer, but Purdue senior Thea Hoffmeister was disqualified for signing an incorrect scorecard. The total score on her card (75) was correct, but she had signed for a score higher than she had on the par-4 12th, but also signed for a five on the par-5 18th hole when she had actually scored a six.

As a result of the disqualification, Purdue was forced to include a 77 from Maude-Aimee LeBlanc instead of the 75 that Hoffmeister shot.

Teams start five players and keep the top four scores.

Purdue head coach Devon Brouse was bothered by the error.

"You shouldn't have to teach that lesson too many times because if you do that in the last round of the NCAA tournament, obviously there are going to be some consequences."

Still, Brouse said he did soften the message to Hoffmeister.

"I just gave her a hug and said, 'You know what? It's a mistake. We all make mistakes. Nobody's perfect.'

"It's a little surprising because she's a very bright girl, but you get excited, you get nervous, things happen."

Tiffany Lua led UCLA, finishing at 1-under for the tournament, good enough to tie for fourth in the individual race.

"For me, the whole back nine was a bit of a blur," Lua said. "We definitely just fought for every single shot out there."

Lua said winning a national championship caused her to get a bit reflective.

"At the beginning of the year, we set our goals and everybody wants to win the national championship and you think about all the extra workouts and all the extra practices that you dreaded to go through but you did it as a team.

"You look back now and you think to yourself that it's all worth it."

For much of May 21, there was doubt as to whether or not the final round would be completed before dark. Tournament officials were even planning to put utility vehicles with lights on the area surrounding the 18th hole to light the green if need be. In the end, the tournament ended with mere minutes of daylight to spare, a fact Forsyth was glad for.

"We definitely didn't want to come back and play tomorrow," she said.
