Alabama captures first title after defeating Illinois in title match: With Alabama getting set to play in the final of the NCAA Division I Men's Golf Championships for the second year in a row, coach Jay Seawell got a good-natured call from Nick Saban.

Obviously, the Crimson Tide's football coach knows a thing or two about winning national titles.

"He asked, 'Do you want me to come over and coach your team?'" Seawell said, breaking into a big smile. "I was like, 'Sure. You've got a better record in championships than I do.'"

No need. The Tide did just fine without Saban's help.

Showing again it's more than just a football school, Alabama won its first national title in men's golf with a dominating 4-1 victory over Illinois in match play June 2.

This championship was especially sweet for a team that lost to Texas in the 2012 final.

"It's been a long 365 days," Seawell said. "But that just makes it more special. It makes you appreciate it more."

Bobby Wyatt got the Tide off to a rousing start in the No. 1 match at Capital City Club's Crabapple Course north of Atlanta, winning the first seven holes on the way to a 6-and-5 blowout of Thomas Detry. Alabama didn't have to sweat it in the No. 5 match, either, as Cory Whitsett went 5-up by the turn and cruised to a 4-and-3 victory against Alex Burge.

The middle three matches were much tighter – each of them all-square at one point coming down the stretch, giving Illinois a glimmer of hope at improbably pulling out its first national title.

But Trey Mullinax, after squandering chances to pull ahead with three-putts at the 14th and 16th holes, two-putted from 60 feet for a par at the 18th for a 1-up victory over Charlie Danielson in the No. 2 match. The Illinois player missed the green with his approach, chipped up to about 10 feet, but rolled the putt past the right lip of the cup for a bogey.

When Mullinax knocked down his 3-footer, a huge roar went up from the predominantly Alabama crowd that could be heard by the other groups still on the course.

After that, it ended quickly.

When Burge missed a 15-foot par putt at the 15th, he conceded Whitsett's short bogey attempt to end that match. Up ahead on the 16th green, at essentially the same time, Scott Strohmeier rolled in a 3-footer for par to beat Brian Campbell 3-and-2.

Wyatt's strong start helped calm his teammates. They knew the Tide already had one point in the bag, which meant the other four players merely had to split their matches.

"He's a really streaky player," Whitsett said. "When he gets hot, he's really hot. No one can beat him when he's firing on all cylinders."

Even so, Wyatt never envisioned being 7-up as he walked off the seventh green.

"It doesn't get any better than that," he said. "I just had to keep my head down, keep plugging along. I wanted to get to the finish as early as possible."

Thomas Pieters, the 2012 individual champion, earned the Fighting Illini's lone point with a 1-up victory against Justin Thomas in the No. 3 pairing. That wasn't nearly enough to halt the Tide, which had been on a mission ever since the bitter loss to Texas a year ago.

While Alabama was the nation's second-ranked team, Illinois was a surprising finalist. It stunned top-seeded California, 3-2, in the semifinals when Pieters defeated individual champion Max Homa on the second extra hole of their match.

But Illinois couldn't pull off another upset.

"Alabama had an edge to it [Sunday]," coach Mike Small said. "We were up against a buzz saw."

"I don't think a lot of people expected us to be in the national championship," Pieters said. "We thought we could do it. We worked so hard to get to this moment. It's a shame we didn't get it done today. But Alabama played really, really well."

Homa posted a 9-under-par 201 in the three rounds of stroke play to win by three shots over a group of six players who were tied for second. He is California's first individual champion.
