All-Time Tournament Field

Note: The column "How" indicates how teams qualified for the tournament: "Q" means automatic qualifier and "L" indicates at-large selection. In the "Conference" column, for an independent or conference team that earned automatic qualification by winning the conference tournament of an unofficially recognized conference, that conference is listed in parentheses. Other notations in the conference column are listed at the end of this section.

Tournament Moments ...

March 30, 1987, championship game in the Louisiana Superdome in New Orleans – Baton Rouge native Keith Smart had been benched for a stretch of the second half in the title game against Syracuse by Indiana coach Bob Knight. Responding to his angry coach's challenge, Smart got his retribution by burying a 15-foot baseline jump shot with four seconds left to give the Hoosiers a 74-73 championship win.
