Only a handful of No. 15-seeds have won a tournament game. That includes when Tarvis Williams (40) helped lead Hampton to a 58-57 upset win over No. 2-seed Iowa State in 2001.

In 1997, the Arizona-Kentucky match up in the title game enticed viewers in 18,290,000 homes across the country to tune in. Viewers were not disappointed as the score was tied at the end of regulation. Although a freshman, Arizona's Mike Bibby led the Wildcats as the point guard past North Carolina in the national semifinals and to an 84-79 overtime victory against Kentucky in the final.

Tournament History

- 1939 The first National Collegiate men's basketball tournament was held. For the first 12 years, district playoffs often were held with the winner entering an eight-team field for the championship. The district games were not considered a part of the tournament. The winners of the East and West regionals were the only two teams to advance to the final site.
During the title game, the championship trophy was sitting on a table next to the court when Oregon's Bobby Anet dove for a loose ball and knocked the trophy over, splitting it in half. Oregon went on to win the game and both halves of the trophy.
- 1940 The National Association of Basketball Coaches held its annual convention at the site of the national finals for the first time. It has been held in conjunction with the tournament ever since.
- 1946 The championship game was televised locally for the first time in New York City by WCBS-TV as Oklahoma State defeated North Carolina, 43-40. The initial viewing audience was estimated to be 500,000.
This was the first time four teams advanced to the final site. With only Eastern and Western regionals, the two regional champions played for the national title while the regional runners-up played for third place.
- 1950 CCNY became the only team to win both national postseason tournaments: the NCAA tournament and the National Invitational Tournament (NIT).
- 1951 The field was expanded to 16 teams, with 10 conference champions qualifying automatically for the first time. Those 10 conferences were: Big Seven (Big Eight), Big Ten, Border, Eastern (Ivy), Missouri Valley, Mountain States (also known as Skyline), Pacific Coast (Pac 12), Southeastern, Southern and Southwest.
- 1952 Tournament games were televised regionally for the first time.
The number of regional sites was changed from two to four, with the four winners advancing to the finals. This change led to the first true Final Four as the national semifinals and national final format began.
- 1953 The bracket was expanded from 16 teams to 22 and fluctuated between 22 and 25 teams until 1974.
Teams were limited to one national postseason tournament. No longer could teams play in both the NCAA tournament and the National Invitation Tournament (NIT).
- 1954 The Tuesday-Wednesday format for the semifinals and the final game was changed to Friday-Saturday.
The championship game was televised nationally for the first time as La Salle defeated Bradley, 92-76, in Kansas City, Missouri.
- 1957 The largest media group to date assembled for the championship game in Kansas City, Missouri. Coverage included an 11-station television network, 64 newspaper writers and live radio broadcasts on 73 stations in 11 states.
- 1963 A contract to run through 1968 was worked out with Sports Network for the championship game to be televised nationally. Television rights totaled $140,000.
For the first time, sites for the tournament competition were selected two years in advance.
- 1966 Net income for the entire tournament exceeded $500,000 for the first time.

- 1969 A television-blackout provision requiring a 48-hour advance sellout was adopted. The Friday-Saturday format for the semifinals and the final game was changed to Thursday-Saturday.
NBC was selected to televise the championship at television rights totaling $547,500, exceeding $500,000 for the first time. The tournament's net income of $1,032,915 was the first time above the million-dollar mark.
- 1971 NBC recorded the largest audience ever for a basketball network telecast during the semifinals as 9,320,000 homes saw the game.
- 1973 The Thursday-Saturday format for the semifinals and the championship game was changed to Saturday-Monday.
Television rights totaled $1,165,755, exceeding $1 million for the first time. NBC reported that the championship game was the highest-rated basketball telecast of all time. The contest received a rating of 20.5 and was seen by 13,580,000 television households reaching a total audience of 39 million people. Also for the first time, the championship game was televised in prime time.
TVS, with the approval of NBC, agreed to televise those games not carried by NBC for a two-year period at the rights fee of $65,000 per year.
First-round byes were determined on the basis of the conference's won-lost record during the past 10 years in NCAA tournament play.
The first public draw to fill oversubscribed orders for Final Four game tickets was administered by the committee for the 1974 championship.
- 1974 The bracket rotation was changed for the first time, eliminating East versus West bracketing in effect since 1939. East played West and Midwest played Midwest in the national semifinals.
The Eastern College Athletic Conference was divided to receive multiple automatic-qualification berths in the tournament.
- 1975 A 32-team bracket was adopted and one team other than the conference champion could be chosen at large from the same conference for the first time.
Locker rooms were opened to media representatives after a 10-minute cooling-off period.
The term "Final Four" first appeared in an NCAA publication, the 1975 Official Collegiate Basketball Guide. On Page 5 in the National Preview-Review section written by Ed Chay of the Cleveland Plain Dealer, Chay wrote, "Outspoken Al McGuire of Marquette, whose team was one of the final four in Greensboro, was among several coaches who said it was good for college basketball that UCLA was finally beaten." The first time Final Four was capitalized was in the 1978 basketball guide.
- 1976 The rights for the NCAA Radio Network were awarded to Host Communications, Inc., of Lexington, Kentucky.
Regional third-place games were eliminated.
For the first time, two teams from the same conference (Big Ten) played in the national championship game, with Indiana defeating Michigan.
- 1977 NBC televised 23 hours and 18 minutes of tournament programming.

Indiana guard Quinn Buckner (21) helped lead the Hoosiers past Michigan, 86-68, in the 1976 championship game. Both teams were from the Big Ten Conference, marking the first time that two teams from the same league played in the national title game.

- 1978 A seeding process was used for the first time for individual teams. A maximum of four automatic-qualifying conference teams were seeded in each of the four regional brackets. These teams were seeded based on their respective conferences' won-lost percentages in tournament play during the past five years. At-large seeding in each region was based on current won-lost records, strength of schedule and eligibility status of student-athletes for postseason competition. These seeds were not made public. The next year, the bracket included the seeds.
- NBC televised the four regional championship games and a first-round double-header on Saturday and Sunday.
- NCAA Productions began producing first- and second-round and selected regional semifinal games and airing them in the regions of the participating teams.
- The first public drawing of Final Four game tickets was held. There were approximately 70,000 requests for 10,000 available tickets.
- Complimentary tickets for all NCAA championships were eliminated.
- 1979 The bracket was expanded to 40 teams and all teams were seeded for the first time. The 16 conferences with the best won-lost records during the previous five years of championship play received byes into the second round. Eight additional byes were available to independents, second conference teams and champions of other conferences.
- NBC received a record one-game rating with a 24.1 in Michigan State's national championship victory over Indiana State. The 38 share and the 18 million homes viewing were both records at the time.
- Three-man officiating crews were assigned for all tournament games.
- 1980 The bracket was expanded to 48 teams, which included 24 automatic qualifiers and 24 at-large teams. The top 16 seeds received byes to the second round.
- The limit of two teams from the same conference being allowed in the tournament was lifted. This gave the committee maximum flexibility to balance the bracket as well as to select the best possible at-large entrants.
- ESPN began telecasting nationally the games that were being produced by NCAA Productions. ESPN continued its coverage of early-round games through the 1990 tournament.
- 1981 Principles for the seeding and placement of teams to develop a balanced tournament bracket were implemented. They included establishing 12 levels that transcended each of the four regions; dividing each region into three sections with four levels each; limiting to one the number of conference teams that could be placed in each regional section; and placing teams in their geographical area or on their home court if doing so did not compromise the first three principles.
- A computer ranking system, the Rating Percentage Index or RPI, was used as an aid in evaluating teams for at-large selections and seeding.
- It became policy that "no more than 50 percent of the tournament berths shall be filled by automatic qualifiers."
- For the first time, the NCAA registered a trademark for the term "Final Four," with a stated first use of 1978.
- The championship game between Indiana and North Carolina was almost postponed. Earlier in the day, President Ronald Reagan was wounded in an assassination attempt and was taken to George Washington University Hospital. The championship game could not be played the next night because The Spectrum in Philadelphia was scheduled to host the 76ers in an NBA playoff game. Not until Dr. Dennis O'Leary announced that Reagan was out of danger did it clear the way for NCAA officials to decide to play the title game as scheduled.
- Virginia defeated LSU in the last third-place game conducted at the Final Four site.
- 1982 CBS was awarded the television rights for 16 exposures to the championship for three years.
- The selection show was shown on live national television for the first time.
- North Carolina's national championship win against Georgetown received a 21.6 rating and was the 11th-ranked prime-time program for that week. CBS also achieved second-round record ratings with an 11.8 rating and 27 share Saturday, and an 11.3 rating and 28 share Sunday.
- Host Communications, Inc., and the CBS Radio Network co-produced the NCAA Radio Network.
- Besides a championship game that was remembered for North Carolina freshman Michael Jordan hitting a 16-foot game-winning jumper over Georgetown, the Final Four was also the first to be held in a dome -- the Superdome in New Orleans.
- 1983 An opening round was added that required the representatives of eight automatic-qualifying conferences to compete for four positions in the 52-team tournament bracket. This concept permitted the committee to retain a 48-team bracket evenly balanced with 24 automatic qualifiers and 24 at-large selections, yet award automatic qualification to each of the 28 conferences that received it the year before. The 16 top-seeded teams received byes to the second round.
- The current format in which the tournament starts the third weekend in March, with regional championships on the fourth Saturday and Sunday, and the national semifinals and final the following Saturday and Monday, was established.
- North Carolina State's national championship victory over Houston attracted what then was a record 18.6 million homes to the CBS telecast. The game had a 22.3 rating (third best) and a 32 share. It was the fifth-ranked prime-time television program for that week.
- A national semifinal record also was set in Houston's victory over Louisville. The game had a 17.8 rating and 35 share and was viewed by 14,800,000 homes on CBS. It was determined that the Final Four site must have a minimum of 17,000 seats.
- 1984 One additional opening-round game was established, requiring 10 automatic-qualifying conferences to compete for five positions in the 53-team bracket that included 24 automatic qualifiers and 24 at-large selections.
- For the first time, awards were presented to all participating teams in the championship.
- 1985 The tournament bracket was expanded to include 64 teams, which eliminated all first-round byes.
- The committee realigned each region and renamed the Mideast region the Southeast region. Specifically, the Southern and Mid-Eastern conferences were moved from the East to the Southeast region; the Big Ten, Mid-American and Southwestern conferences moved from the Southeast to the Midwest; the Metro and Trans America conferences were moved from the Midwest to the Southeast, and the Southland and Southwest conferences were moved from the Midwest to the West region.
- The number of automatic qualifiers was capped at 30 for a five-year period (1986-90).
- CBS had a record 19.8 million homes view Villanova's national championship victory over Georgetown. The game attracted a 23.3 rating (second best) and a 33 share, and was the second-rated prime-time program on television for that week.
- The East regional championship game (Georgetown defeated Georgia Tech) set television records for that level of tournament competition with a 12.6 rating, a 32 share and 10.7 million homes tuned to CBS.
- The NCAA Radio Network reached an all-time high radio audience for any sports event when the Villanova-Georgetown game attracted 21 million listeners.
- CBS began a second three-year contract that included 19 exposures.
- 1986 CBS televised 40 hours, 51 minutes of tournament programming.
- The NCAA Radio Network included a record 426 stations, including 92 of the top 100 markets.
- The bracketing policy was changed so two teams from the same conference could not compete against each other before the regional semifinals.
- It became policy that all regional competition be played at neutral sites and hosting institutions must play in another region.
- Three separate three-man officiating crews were assigned to the two national semifinals and the championship final.
- The NCAA conducted its first random, computerized drawing for the general public's allotment of Final Four tickets.
- 1987 The National Association of Basketball Coaches reaffirmed its endorsement of the policy that permits an institution to participate on its home court in the first and second rounds of competition.
- Policy was changed to prohibit teams from the same conference from competing against each other before the regional championship game.
- Championship team members were awarded 10-karat gold rings, while the other three teams in the Final Four received silver rings.
- All 64 teams selected for the championship were subject to drug testing for the first time.
- At the end of the CBS telecast of the championship game, a song written by David Barrett titled "One Shining Moment" accompanied a montage of tournament action for the first time.
- 1988 CBS began a third three-year contract. All regional semifinal games were televised in prime time.
- Separate three-man officiating crews were assigned to all competition at regional and national championship sites.
- 1989 The NCAA Executive Committee expanded a moratorium enacted in 1984 limiting the bracket to 30 automatic-qualifying conference champions and 34 at-large teams through the 1998 championship.
- NCAA Executive Regulation 1-6-(b)-1 was amended to strengthen criteria governing automatic qualification for conferences.
- Bracket rotation was established, with East vs. West, Midwest vs. Southeast in 1989; Southeast vs. West, East vs. Midwest in 1990, and West vs. Midwest, Southeast vs. East in 1991.
- Awards for the national runner-up were presented in the dressing room immediately after the championship game.
- Host Communications, Inc., began a three-year contract for rights to the NCAA Radio Network and programs for all sites.
- Neutral courts were used in all rounds of the championship for the first time.
- After determining that three of the next four Final Four host facilities should have a minimum capacity of 30,000, the committee selected Charlotte, Seattle, The Meadowlands and Indianapolis to host in 1994, 1995, 1996 and 1997.
- 1990 The general public was limited to purchasing two tickets to future Final Fours.
- The basketball committee defined "home court" as an arena in which a team has played more than 50 percent of its home regular-season schedule, excluding conference tournament games.
- The NCAA Executive Committee approved a "play-in" concept to identify the 30 automatic-qualifying conferences in December 1989. The Rating Percentage Index (RPI) administered by the NCAA was computed for the nonconference schedules of all eligible conferences. Those with the lowest ranking competed for the available automatic-qualifying positions. The play-in was implemented in 1991 with 33 eligible conferences. Six conference representatives played for three automatic-qualifying berths in the 64-team bracket.

For the first time, the RPI was updated daily during the selection meetings. Previously, the RPI was updated only once throughout the night before the meetings began and used throughout the selection process.

1991 CBS Sports began a seven-year contract for $1 billion, which included live coverage of all sessions of the championship.

The NCAA began a new system for distributing championship revenue to the membership. The system was based upon sports sponsorship, grants-in-aid, and basketball performance, and also included funding for academic enhancement and special assistance to student-athletes. The basketball fund was based on each conference's performance during a rolling six-year period.

The definition of "home court" was further defined to exclude from hosting arenas in which teams played more than three games of a regular-season schedule, excluding conference tournaments.

A play-in was conducted between the six lowest-rated conferences from the previous year's RPI since 33 conferences were eligible for automatic qualification. Game results were as follows: Saint Francis (Pennsylvania) (Northeast Conference) defeated Fordham (Patriot League), 70-64; Louisiana-Monroe (Southland) defeated Florida A&M (Mid-Eastern), 87-63; and Coastal Carolina (Big South) defeated Jackson State (Southwestern), 86-75.

Only 29 automatic berths were given instead of 30 because Missouri won the Big Eight conference tournament and was ineligible for the NCAA tournament.

1992 Duke won its second consecutive national championship, the first team to successfully defend its title since UCLA in 1973.

1993 A minimum facility seating capacity of 12,000 for first and second rounds and regionals was established.

The basketball committee selected San Antonio; St. Petersburg, Florida; Indianapolis; Minneapolis; and Atlanta to host the Final Four in 1998 through 2002. All the facilities had capacities in excess of 30,000.

1994 For the first time, all 100 of the top 100 markets in the country received the radio play-by-play broadcast of the Final Four. This included a record 488 stations.

President Bill Clinton became the first sitting president to attend the tournament, when he was present at the Midwest regional championship game in Dallas and the national semifinals and final in Charlotte, North Carolina.

The use of combined shot clocks/game clocks was required at all sites.

The committee agreed to attempt to assign the top four seeds in each region away from a site that may create a "home-crowd advantage" for their opponents. The committee recognized that it could be necessary to move lower-seeded teams from their natural regions in order to accomplish this.

The weighing of the three factors composing the Rating Percentage Index (RPI), Division I winning percentage, opponents' winning percentage and opponents' opponent's winning percentage, was adjusted from 20-40-40 to 25-50-25. Factor IV was introduced to produce an adjusted RPI. It was based on a team's "good" wins, "bad" losses and nonconference scheduling.

1995 The existing CBS Sports contract was replaced with a new agreement for $1.725 billion extending through the 2002 championship.

1996 The NCAA created the first online computer page for the men's Final Four. Pool reporters were permitted under specified conditions to interview game officials after games.

Participating institutions' seating locations were moved closer to midcourt and nearer to the playing floor.

1997 Bracketing policies were changed so that once the highest-seeded team from a conference is assigned to a region, only the eighth team selected from that conference may be placed in that region.

The NCAA's online computer page was expanded to include preliminary rounds.

1998 Competition at all three sites within each region began being conducted on the same days of the week and tournament hosts' teams were permitted to play on the days they are hosting.

The name of the Southeast Region was changed to the South Region.

The basketball committee continued selecting Final Four host facilities with a minimum seating capacity of 30,000, when it picked New Orleans, San Antonio, St. Louis, Indianapolis and Atlanta to host from 2003 to 2007.

1999 Bracketing policies were changed so that, once the highest-seeded team from a conference is assigned to a region, only the sixth team from that conference may be placed in that region.

The NCAA signed a new 11-year agreement with CBS Sports, commencing with the 2003 championship. The agreement, which was for a minimum of $6 billion, included rights to television (over-the-air, cable, satellite, digital and home video), marketing, game programs, radio, Internet, fan festivals and licensing (excluding concessionaire agreements).

In its continuing effort to combat the effects of gambling, the committee began conducting background checks on game officials. The NCAA checked 50 officials randomly selected from among the 96 who worked the previous year's tournament.

2000 The NCAA and the Illinois High School Association formed the "March Madness Athletic Association" and applied for trademark registration for the term "March Madness." The registration was granted in 2001.

2001 Inasmuch as 31 conferences were eligible for automatic qualification, the committee agreed to conduct an opening-round game the Tuesday before the first/second rounds, pitting teams seeded Nos. 64 and 65.

The National Network (TNN) telecast the opening-round game.

For the first time, the NCAA registered a trademark for the term "Big Dance," with a stated first use of 2000.

2002 Championship-, first- and second-round sites were no longer assigned to specific regions. Rather, the committee had the flexibility to assign four-team pods to sites near the teams' natural geographic areas, if possible.

The committee eliminated the bracketing provision that, once the highest-seeded team from a conference was assigned to a region, only the sixth team from that conference could be placed in that region.

CBS expanded its live selection show to one hour.

ESPN televised the opening-round game for the first time.

First-/second-round sites in non-domed stadiums drew 99.5 percent of capacity, an all-time record at the time.

During the selection meeting, for the first time, each committee member had the use of an individual computer for researching and evaluating teams.

2003 Westwood One assumed administration of the tournament's radio rights.

The committee set the minimum Final Four seating capacity at 40,000 and picked San Antonio, Detroit, Indianapolis and Houston to host from 2008 to 2011.

2004 Rather than using the traditional annual rotation of Final Four semifinals pairings (i.e., West vs. East, South vs. Midwest), the committee assigned the pairings during selection weekend. The top No. 1 seed's region was assigned to meet the fourth No. 1 seed's region and the second No. 1 seed's region met the third No. 1 seed's region.

Directional regional site designations (i.e., East, South, Midwest, West) were dropped. Instead, regional sites were known by the city in which the games were played (e.g., Atlanta regional).

2005 Culminating a four-year study, the committee revised the RPI formula to give additional weight to playing on the road. The new formula weighed road victories and home losses at 1.4; home victories and road losses at .6; and neutral-site victories and losses at 1.0. The new weighting system affected only Factor I of the RPI. Factor IV was eliminated.

CBS began a two-year deal with CSTV.com for exclusive Internet video streaming rights for out-of-market game coverage of the first 58 games of the tournament.

The committee revised the bracketing principles to permit two teams from the same conference to meet each other before the regional final if the conference had more than eight teams selected for the championship.

Attendance at first-/second-round and regional sites was 98.4 percent of the facilities' capacity, an all-time record. Arenas other than domes were filled to 99.9 percent of capacity, also a record.

2006 The official RPI was released to the public for the first time February 1, 2006, when the Rating Percentage Index appeared on the NCAA website: ncaasports.com.

The committee revised the bracketing principles so that if it is unable to reconcile the bracket after exhausting all possible options, it has the flexibility to permit two teams from the same conference to meet each other after the first round, if the conference has more than five participants.

2007 The committee returned to geographical regional site designations rather than identifying the sites by the host city, as it did from 2004-06. Regional sites were referred to as East, South, Midwest and West, rather than East Rutherford, San Antonio, St. Louis and San Jose.

In response to tremendous traffic resulting in 19 million video streams and five million visits in 2006, CBS Sportsline doubled its bandwidth capacity for March Madness on Demand, which offers free live Internet streams of each game of the first three rounds of the championship.

CSTV's coverage was expanded to include live broadcasts of two first-round games, pregame and postgame previews and recaps on all competition dates, and video streaming of postgame press conferences that are archived at www.ncaasports.com. In addition, CSTV aired live programming during open practice day at the Final Four, aired a National Championship Pregame Show live from the Georgia Dome, and provided coverage to ancillary events such as Hoop City, My CokeFest and The Big Dance at Centennial Olympic Park.

2008 For the first time in tournament history, all four No. 1 seeds advanced to the Final Four.

The continuing growth in popularity for ancillary events was on display as Hoop City set an all-time attendance record with more than 63,000 visitors during a four-day period, while The Big Dance attracted 167,000 people to the streets of San Antonio.

For the first time, the NABC College All-Star Game was held at the same venue as the Final Four. The game attracted 4,800 fans to the Alamodome.

CBSsports.com and March Madness on Demand launched a developer platform that allowed more than 200 websites to carry live video of the championship online, including sites such as ESPN.com, Yahoo, Sl.com, YouTube and Facebook. CBS allowed users to watch all 63 games that it telecast during the tournament for the first time, and saw the total number of unique visitors from first-round games through the regional championship games escalate from 1.75 million to 4.33 million.

The committee selected New Orleans, Atlanta, North Texas, Indianapolis and Houston to host Final Fours from 2012 to 2016.

2009 The category of "last 12 games" was eliminated from the official criteria for tournament selection.

For the first time, a U.S. president filled out his bracket on national television as President Barack Obama explained his picks to ESPN's Andy Katz. Obama picked the correct winner with North Carolina.

The Big East Conference became the first league to have three teams seeded No. 1 and the first to send five teams to the Sweet 16.

Basketball legends Earvin "Magic" Johnson and Larry Bird marked the 30th anniversary of the 1979 title game between Michigan State and Indiana State by presenting the game ball before the national championship game.

While usually performed by one of the school bands, for the first time the national anthem was sung by national entertainers at the Final Four: The Temptations.

For the first time, students from each of the Final Four teams could sit at court level. More than 400 students from each school were able to buy seats located behind the basket for less than $7 a game and could stand and cheer throughout the games without obstructing the view of other spectators.

In Detroit, record crowds attended the Final Four games (145,378), Hoop City (76,000) and The Big Dance (300,000). More than 1,700 participated in the 5K Run/Walk and another 4,000 were part of the Final Four Dribble.

The Final Four telecasts by CBS were distributed to 153 countries around the world and shown on the Armed Forces Network. With Westwood One Radio, the Armed Forces Radio Network, Sirius/XM satellite radio and NCAA online, the games were heard in 170 countries and 150 ships at sea.

2010 The NCAA announced it would exercise a clause in its contract with CBS, signed in 1999, to opt out of the deal in order to sign a new 14-year, $10.8 billion deal with CBS Sports and Turner Broadcasting. The television, Internet and wireless rights agreement also called for CBS and Turner to collaborate on the NCAA's corporate marketing program. In addition, all tournament games were shown live across the country (on CBS, TBS, TNT and truTV), which was a first in the championship's history. The new agreement included an expansion of the tournament field to 68 teams in 2011. It was the first expansion since the field went from 64 to 65 teams in 2001. A revamped Bracket Town (formerly known as Hoop City) was a five-day fan fest that attracted nearly 53,000 people.

Indianapolis-based Butler became the seventh school to advance to the Final Four being hosted in its own city. The games were played in Lucas Oil Stadium. NCAA rules prohibit live animals to be present during tournament games, but Butler's mascot bulldog, Blue II, was granted a special exemption and allowed to attend the festivities. Blue II attended the next year also when Butler advanced to the 2011 Final Four in Houston.

2011 Online and mobile viewers were treated to added features that enhanced the viewing experience. For the first time, March Madness on Demand (MMOD) was available free to iPad and iPhone users in addition to online via NCAA.com. Despite the increased availability of games on TV, total visits to MMOD platforms, including broadband and mobile, were up 63 percent. In addition, more than 13.7 million total hours of streaming video was consumed through the MMOD broadband application and iPad and iPhone apps.

The newly expanded field of 68 teams featured four first-round games, two of which included the last four teams of the overall seed list (Nos. 65-68). The other two games pitted the last four at-large teams selected to the field against each other. It marked the first time in tournament history that the final at-large teams were revealed to the public. The four games constituted the first round of the championship and were branded as the First Four. Games formerly considered first- and second-round games were changed to second- and third-round games.

VCU, a No. 11 seed and a team the Division I Men's Basketball Committee was criticized for selecting as an at-large team, made history by playing in the inaugural First Four and then advancing to the school's first Final Four by winning five straight games. The Rams became the first team to play six games and not play in the title game.

Cincinnati and Connecticut became the first schools from the same conference to play each before the tournament regionals. Connecticut won the Big East showdown in the third round and went on to win the NCAA championship.

All 68 teams in the tournament earned a unit in the Basketball Fund, with each advancing institution earning an additional unit leading up to the Final Four.

2012 Working with television partners from Turner and CBS, the Division I Men's Basketball Committee decided that teams advancing from the First Four would be exempt from playing the first game of the first session at a second-round site.

The committee's ranking of the 68 tournament teams, commonly known as the overall seed list, was revealed publicly for the first time.

The Super 10 Fan Selection Committee consisted of contest winners from entrants who submitted videos via the March Madness Facebook page. Winners were flown to Atlanta and spent three days in deliberations regarding the tournament field during the actual selection weekend. The fan committee had access to Nitty Gritty reports and team sheets, which for the first time were released to the public each week during the season.

1,566 media members were credentialed for the Final Four, the most ever.

Games were broadcast internationally via ESPN International to more than 200 countries across the globe. These include Australia, Brazil, Canada, China, Egypt, France, Germany, Greece, India, Israel, Italy, Japan, Mexico, New Zealand, Russia, Saudi Arabia, South Africa, South Korea and Spain.

In addition to its national and global telecast and online availability via March Madness Live, the Final Four had the potential to be viewed by approximately one million U.S. Armed Forces, Department of Defense civilian employees and their families stationed overseas and aboard 140 U.S. Navy ships at sea via the American Armed Forces Radio Network.

2013 In the 2012 Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade, the NCAA had a float for the first time that officially kicked off the 75th Celebration of March Madness. The float featured Kareem Abdul-Jabbar (Lew Alcindor), David Thompson and Christian Laettner.

Tournament Moments ...

March 28, 1992, East regional final at the Spectrum in Philadelphia – With Duke down by a point with 2.1 seconds remaining in overtime, the Blue Devils' Grant Hill inbounded the ball from under Kentucky's basket to Christian Laettner, who stood near the free-throw stripe on the other end of the court. With his back to the basket, Laettner dribbled once to his left, turned and sank a 17-foot jump shot. Duke advanced to the Final Four with the 104-103 victory.
