Annual Individual Leaders

Note: On all percentages and averages of the year-by-year leaders, a player must have played in at least 50 percent of the maximum tournament games. Thus, there is a two-game minimum from 1939 to 1952 and a three-game minimum from 1953 to present. An asterisk (*) indicates later vacated.

- 600 New Mexico State defeated BYU, 74-62, March 8, 1969, in Las Cruces, New Mexico. The West region game was the seventh of nine first-round games played that day.
- 700 Louisiana-Lafayette defeated Texas, 100-70, in Ames, Iowa, in a regional third-place game March 1, 1972. The Midwest region game was the third of four regional third-place games played that day, along with four regional finals.

- 800 Kentucky defeated Syracuse, 95-79, in the national semifinal game March 29, 1975, played in San Diego.
- 900 St. John's (New York) defeated Temple, 75-70, March 9 in the first game of the 1979 tournament. The East region game took place in Raleigh, North Carolina.
- 1,000 Villanova defeated Houston, 90-72, March 13, 1981, in Charlotte, North Carolina. The East region game was the fifth of eight first-round games played that day.
- 1,100 Iowa defeated Utah State, 64-59, March 18, 1983, in Louisville, Kentucky. The Midwest region game was the sixth of eight first-round games played that day.
- 1,200 Illinois State defeated Southern California, 58-55, March 14, 1985, in Tulsa, Oklahoma. The Midwest region game was the 15th of 16 first-round games played that day.
- 1,300 Louisville defeated North Carolina, 94-79, March 20, 1986, in Houston. The West region semifinal game was the fourth of four games played that day.
- 1,400 Maryland defeated UC Santa Barbara, 92-82, March 18, 1988, in Cincinnati. The Southeast region game was the 10th of 16 first-round games played that day.
- 1,500 Michigan defeated Seton Hall, 80-79 in overtime, for the national championship April 3, 1989, in Seattle. It was the first time in tournament history that a first-year head coach, Steve Fisher, won the national title.
- 1,600 Temple defeated Richmond, 77-64, March 16, 1991, in East Rutherford, New Jersey. The East region game was the fifth of eight second-round games played that day.
- 1,700 In one of the biggest upsets in tournament history, Santa Clara defeated Arizona, 64-61, March 18, 1993, in Salt Lake City. The West region game was the 11th of 16 first-round games played that day. It was the second time in tournament history that a No. 15 seed defeated a No. 2 seed.
- 1,800 In the game to decide the final team to make the 1994 "Sweet 16," Louisville defeated Minnesota, 60-55, March 20 in Sacramento, California. The West region game was the final game of the second round and the fourth game in the tournament played that day.

- 1,900 Iowa State defeated California, 74-64, March 14, 1996, in Dallas. The Midwest region game was the 12th of 16 first-round games played that day.
- 2,000 In the game to decide the final team to make the 1997 Final Four, Arizona defeated Providence, 96-92 in overtime, March 23 in Birmingham, Alabama. The Southeast regional final was the second and final game played in the tournament that day. Arizona went on to win its first national championship in basketball.
- 2,100 In the first game of the 1999 second round, St. John's (New York) defeated Indiana, 86-61, March 13 in the South region in Orlando, Florida.
- 2,200 In the seventh game of the 2001 first round, Final Four-bound Maryland got by George Mason, 83-80, March 15 in the West region in Boise, Idaho.
- 2,300 In the 11th game of the 2002 second round, Illinois defeated Creighton, 72-60, March 17 in Chicago.
- 2,400 In the 14th game of the 2004 first round, Air Force, making its first tournament appearance since 1962, fell to North Carolina, 63-52, March 18 in Denver.
- 2,500 In the second of four games played March 24, of the 2005 regional semifinals, top-ranked and No. 1-seed Illinois defeated Milwaukee, 77-63, in Chicago.
- 2,600 In the sixth of 16 first-round games March 16, 2007, tournament newcomer and 15th-seed Texas A&M-Corpus Christi gave No. 2-seed Wisconsin a scare. The Islanders jumped out to a 25-7 lead and led by eight at halftime. But it was all Badgers in the second half as they came back for the 76-63 win in Chicago.
- 2,700 In the last 2008 regional final, Memphis completed the No. 1-seed sweep by defeating No. 2-seed Texas, 85-67, March 30 in Houston. It was the first time all four No. 1 seeds advanced to the Final Four.
- 2,800 In the 14th game played of the first round March 19, 2010, No. 2-seed Ohio State handled UC Santa Barbara, 68-51. The Midwest region game was played in Milwaukee.
- 2,900 In the 2011 championship game played in Houston April 4, No. 3-seed UConn won, 53-41, over Butler, which was making its second straight appearance in the title game.
- 3,000 In the 13th game of 16 Friday second-round games March 22, 2013, No. 7-seed San Diego State defeated No. 10-seed Oklahoma, 70-55, in a South region game in Philadelphia.

Tournament History

- 1939 The first National Collegiate men's basketball tournament was held. For the first 12 years, district playoffs often were held with the winner entering an eight-team field for the championship. The district games were not considered a part of the tournament. The winners of the East and West regionals were the only two teams to advance to the final site.
During the title game, the championship trophy was sitting on a table next to the court when Oregon's Bobby Anet dove for a loose ball and knocked the trophy over, splitting it in half. Oregon went on to win the game and both halves of the trophy.
- 1940 The National Association of Basketball Coaches held its annual convention at the site of the national finals for the first time. It has been held in conjunction with the tournament ever since.
- 1946 The championship game was televised locally for the first time in New York City by WCBS-TV as Oklahoma State defeated North Carolina, 43-40. The initial viewing audience was estimated to be 500,000.
This was the first time four teams advanced to the final site. With only Eastern and Western regionals, the two regional champions played for the national title while the regional runners-up played for third place.
- 1950 CCNY became the only team to win both national postseason tournaments: the NCAA tournament and the National Invitational Tournament (NIT).
- 1951 The field was expanded to 16 teams, with 10 conference champions qualifying automatically for the first time. Those 10 conferences were: Big Seven (Big Eight), Big Ten, Border, Eastern (Ivy), Missouri Valley, Mountain States (also known as Skyline), Pacific Coast (Pac 12), Southeastern, Southern and Southwest.
- 1952 Tournament games were televised regionally for the first time.
The number of regional sites was changed from two to four, with the four winners advancing to the finals. This change led to the first true Final Four as the national semifinals and national final format began.
- 1953 The bracket was expanded from 16 teams to 22 and fluctuated between 22 and 25 teams until 1974.
Teams were limited to one national postseason tournament. No longer could teams play in both the NCAA tournament and the National Invitation Tournament (NIT).
- 1954 The Tuesday-Wednesday format for the semifinals and the final game was changed to Friday-Saturday.
The championship game was televised nationally for the first time as La Salle defeated Bradley, 92-76, in Kansas City, Missouri.
- 1957 The largest media group to date assembled for the championship game in Kansas City, Missouri. Coverage included an 11-station television network, 64 newspaper writers and live radio broadcasts on 73 stations in 11 states.
- 1963 A contract to run through 1968 was worked out with Sports Network for the championship game to be televised nationally. Television rights totaled $140,000.

For the first time, sites for the tournament competition were selected two years in advance.

- 1966 Net income for the entire tournament exceeded $500,000 for the first time.
A television-blackout provision requiring a 48-hour advance sellout was adopted.
- 1969 The Friday-Saturday format for the semifinals and the final game was changed to Thursday-Saturday.
NBC was selected to televise the championship at television rights totaling $547,500, exceeding $500,000 for the first time. The tournament's net income of $1,032,915 was the first time above the million-dollar mark.
- 1971 NBC recorded the largest audience ever for a basketball network telecast during the semifinals as 9,320,000 homes saw the game.
- 1973 The Thursday-Saturday format for the semifinals and the championship game was changed to Saturday-Monday.
Television rights totaled $1,165,755, exceeding $1 million for the first time. NBC reported that the championship game was the highest-rated basketball telecast of all time. The contest received a rating of 20.5 and was seen by 13,580,000 television households reaching a total audience of 39 million people. Also for the first time, the championship game was televised in prime time.
TVS, with the approval of NBC, agreed to televise those games not carried by NBC for a two-year period at the rights fee of $65,000 per year.
First-round byes were determined on the basis of the conference's won-lost record during the past 10 years in NCAA tournament play.
The first public draw to fill oversubscribed orders for Final Four game tickets was administered by the committee for the 1974 championship.
- 1974 The bracket rotation was changed for the first time, eliminating East versus West bracketing in effect since 1939. East played West and Mideast played Midwest in the national semifinals.
The Eastern College Athletic Conference was divided to receive multiple automatic-qualification berths in the tournament.
- 1975 A 32-team bracket was adopted and one team other than the conference champion could be chosen at large from the same conference for the first time.
Locker rooms were opened to media representatives after a 10-minute cooling-off period.
The term "Final Four" first appeared in an NCAA publication, the 1975 Official Collegiate Basketball Guide. On Page 5 in the National Preview-Review section written by Ed Chay of the Cleveland Plain Dealer, Chay wrote, "Outspoken Al McGuire of Marquette, whose team was one of the final four in Greensboro, was among several coaches who said it was good for college basketball that UCLA was finally beaten." The first time Final Four was capitalized was in the 1978 basketball guide.
- 1976 The rights for the NCAA Radio Network were awarded to Host Communications, Inc., of Lexington, Kentucky.
Regional third-place games were eliminated.

Indiana guard Quinn Buckner (21) helped lead the Hoosiers past Michigan, 86-68, in the 1976 championship game. Both teams were from the Big Ten Conference, marking the first time that two teams from the same league played in the national title game.

- For the first time, two teams from the same conference (Big Ten) played in the national championship game, with Indiana defeating Michigan.
- 1977 NBC televised 23 hours and 18 minutes of tournament programming.
- 1978 A seeding process was used for the first time for individual teams. A maximum of four automatic-qualifying conference teams were seeded in each of the four regional brackets. These teams were seeded based on their respective conferences' won-lost percentages in tournament play during the past five years. At-large seeding in each region was based on current won-lost records, strength of schedule and eligibility status of student-athletes for postseason competition. These seeds were not made public. The next year, the bracket included the seeds.
- NBC televised the four regional championship games and a first-round double-header on Saturday and Sunday.
- NCAA Productions began producing first- and second-round and selected regional semifinal games and airing them in the regions of the participating teams.
- The first public drawing of Final Four game tickets was held. There were approximately 70,000 requests for 10,000 available tickets.
- Complimentary tickets for all NCAA championships were eliminated.
- 1979 The bracket was expanded to 40 teams and all teams were seeded for the first time. The 16 conferences with the best won-lost records during the previous five years of championship play received byes into the second round. Eight additional byes were available to independents, second conference teams and champions of other conferences.
- NBC received a record one-game rating with a 24.1 in Michigan State's national championship victory over Indiana State. The 38 share and the 18 million homes viewing were both records at the time.
- Three-man officiating crews were assigned for all tournament games.
- 1980 The bracket was expanded to 48 teams, which included 24 automatic qualifiers and 24 at-large teams. The top 16 seeds received byes to the second round.
- The limit of two teams from the same conference being allowed in the tournament was lifted. This gave the committee maximum flexibility to balance the bracket as well as to select the best possible at-large entrants.
- ESPN began telecasting nationally the games that were being produced by NCAA Productions. ESPN continued its coverage of early-round games through the 1990 tournament.
- 1981 Principles for the seeding and placement of teams to develop a balanced tournament bracket were implemented. They included establishing 12 levels that transcended each of the four regions; dividing each region into three sections with four levels each; limiting to one the number of conference teams that could be placed in each regional section; and placing teams in their geographical area or on their home court if doing so did not compromise the first three principles.
- A computer ranking system, the Rating Percentage Index or RPI, was used as an aid in evaluating teams for at-large selections and seeding.
- It became policy that "no more than 50 percent of the tournament berths shall be filled by automatic qualifiers."
- For the first time, the NCAA registered a trademark for the term "Final Four," with a stated first use of 1978.
- The championship game between Indiana and North Carolina was almost postponed. Earlier in the day, President Ronald Reagan was wounded in an assassination attempt and was taken to George Washington University Hospital. The championship game could not be played the next night because The Spectrum in Philadelphia was scheduled to host the 76ers in an NBA playoff game. Not until Dr. Dennis O'Leary announced that Reagan was out of danger did it clear the way for NCAA officials to decide to play the title game as scheduled.
- Virginia defeated LSU in the last third-place game conducted at the Final Four site.
- 1982 CBS was awarded the television rights for 16 exposures to the championship for three years.
- The selection show was shown on live national television for the first time.
- North Carolina's national championship win against Georgetown received a 21.6 rating and was the 11th-ranked prime-time program for that week. CBS also achieved second-round record ratings with an 11.8 rating and 27 share Saturday, and an 11.3 rating and 28 share Sunday.
- Host Communications, Inc., and the CBS Radio Network co-produced the NCAA Radio Network.
- Besides a championship game that was remembered for North Carolina freshman Michael Jordan hitting a 16-foot game-winning jumper over Georgetown, the Final Four was also the first to be held in a dome -- the Superdome in New Orleans.
- 1983 An opening round was added that required the representatives of eight automatic-qualifying conferences to compete for four positions in the 52-team tournament bracket. This concept permitted the committee to retain a 48-team bracket evenly balanced with 24 automatic qualifiers and 24 at-large selections, yet award automatic qualification to each of the 28 conferences that received it the year before. The 16 top-seeded teams received byes to the second round.
- The current format in which the tournament starts the third weekend in March, with regional championships on the fourth Saturday and Sunday, and the national semifinals and final the following Saturday and Monday, was established.
- North Carolina State's national championship victory over Houston attracted what then was a record 18.6 million homes to the CBS telecast. The game had a 22.3 rating (third best) and a 32 share. It was the fifth-ranked prime-time television program for that week.
- A national semifinal record also was set in Houston's victory over Louisville. The game had a 17.8 rating and was viewed by 14,800,000 homes on CBS. It was determined that the Final Four site must have a minimum of 17,000 seats.
- 1984 One additional opening-round game was established, requiring 10 automatic-qualifying conferences to compete for five positions in the 53-team bracket that included 24 automatic qualifiers and 24 at-large selections.
- For the first time, awards were presented to all participating teams in the championship.
- 1985 The tournament bracket was expanded to include 64 teams, which eliminated all first-round byes.
- The committee realigned each region and renamed the Mideast region the Southeast region. Specifically, the Southern and Mid-Eastern conferences were moved from the East to the Southeast region; the Big Ten, Mid-American and Southwestern conferences moved from the Southeast to the Midwest; the Metro and Trans America conferences were moved from the Midwest to the Southeast, and the Southland and Southwest conferences were moved from the Midwest to the West region.
- The number of automatic qualifiers was capped at 30 for a five-year period (1986-90).
- CBS had a record 19.8 million homes view Villanova's national championship victory over Georgetown. The game attracted a 23.3 rating (second best) and a 33 share, and was the second-rated prime-time program on television for that week.
- The East regional championship game (Georgetown defeated Georgia Tech) set television records for that level of tournament competition with a 12.6 rating, a 32 share and 10.7 million homes tuned to CBS.
- The NCAA Radio Network reached an all-time high radio audience for any sports event when the Villanova-Georgetown game attracted 21 million listeners.
- CBS began a second three-year contract that included 19 exposures.
- 1986 CBS televised 40 hours, 51 minutes of tournament programming.
- The NCAA Radio Network included a record 426 stations, including 92 of the top 100 markets.
- The bracketing policy was changed so two teams from the same conference could not compete against each other before the regional semifinals.
- It became policy that all regional competition be played at neutral sites and hosting institutions must play in another region.
- Three separate three-man officiating crews were assigned to the two national semifinals and the championship final.
- The NCAA conducted its first random, computerized drawing for the general public's allotment of Final Four tickets.
- 1987 The National Association of Basketball Coaches reaffirmed its endorsement of the policy that permits an institution to participate on its home court in the first and second rounds of competition.
- Policy was changed to prohibit teams from the same conference from competing against each other before the regional championship game.
- Championship team members were awarded 10-karat gold rings, while the other three teams in the Final Four received silver rings.
- All 64 teams selected for the championship were subject to drug testing for the first time.
- At the end of the CBS telecast of the championship game, a song written by David Barrett titled "One Shining Moment" accompanied a montage of tournament action for the first time.
- 1988 CBS began a third three-year contract. All regional semifinal games were televised in prime time.
- Separate three-man officiating crews were assigned to all competition at regional and national championship sites.
- 1989 The NCAA Executive Committee expanded a moratorium enacted in 1984 limiting the bracket to 30 automatic-qualifying conference champions and 34 at-large teams through the 1998 championship.
- NCAA Executive Regulation 1-6-(b)-1 was amended to strengthen criteria governing automatic qualification for conferences.
- Bracket rotation was established, with East vs. West, Midwest vs. Southeast in 1989; Southeast vs. West, East vs. Midwest in 1990, and West vs. Midwest, Southeast vs. East in 1991.
- Awards for the national runner-up were presented in the dressing room immediately after the championship game.
- Host Communications, Inc., began a three-year contract for rights to the NCAA Radio Network and programs for all sites.
- Neutral courts were used in all rounds of the championship for the first time.
- After determining that three of the next four Final Four host facilities should have a minimum capacity of 30,000, the committee selected Charlotte, Seattle, The Meadowlands and Indianapolis to host in 1994, 1995, 1996 and 1997.
- 1990 The general public was limited to purchasing two tickets to future Final Fours.
- The basketball committee defined "home court" as an arena in which a team has played more than 50 percent of its home regular-season schedule, excluding conference tournament games.
- The NCAA Executive Committee approved a "play-in" concept to identify the 30 automatic-qualifying conferences in December 1989. The Rating Percentage Index

In 1994, President Bill Clinton became the first sitting president to attend the Final Four, where he watched his home state Arkansas team win the NCAA title. After the game, Clinton congratulated the team and coach Nolan Richardson in the locker room.

(RPI) administered by the NCAA was computed for the nonconference schedules of all eligible conferences. Those with the lowest ranking competed for the available automatic-qualifying positions. The play-in was implemented in 1991 with 33 eligible conferences. Six conference representatives played for three automatic-qualifying berths in the 64-team bracket.

For the first time, the RPI was updated daily during the selection meetings. Previously, the RPI was updated only once through the night before the meetings began and used throughout the selection process.

1991 CBS Sports began a seven-year contract for $1 billion, which included live coverage of all sessions of the championship.

The NCAA began a new system for distributing championship revenue to the membership. The system was based upon sports sponsorship, grants-in-aid, and basketball performance, and also included funding for academic enhancement and special assistance to student-athletes. The basketball fund was based on each conference's performance during a rolling six-year period.

The definition of "home court" was further defined to exclude from hosting arenas in which teams played more than three games of a regular-season schedule, excluding conference tournaments.

A play-in was conducted between the six lowest-rated conferences from the previous year's RPI since 33 conferences were eligible for automatic qualification. Game results were as follows: Saint Francis (Pennsylvania) (Northeast Conference) defeated Fordham (Patriot League), 70-64; Louisiana-Monroe (Southland) defeated Florida A&M (Mid-Eastern), 87-63; and Coastal Carolina (Big South) defeated Jackson State (Southwestern), 86-75.

Only 29 automatic berths were given instead of 30 because Missouri won the Big Eight conference tournament and was ineligible for the NCAA tournament.

1992 Duke won its second consecutive national championship, the first team to successfully defend its title since UCLA in 1973.

1993 A minimum facility seating capacity of 12,000 for first and second rounds and regionals was established.

The basketball committee selected San Antonio; St. Petersburg, Florida; Indianapolis; Minneapolis; and Atlanta to host the Final Four in 1998 through 2002. All the facilities had capacities in excess of 30,000.

1994 For the first time, all 100 of the top 100 markets in the country received the radio play-by-play broadcast of the Final Four. This included a record 488 stations.

President Bill Clinton became the first sitting president to attend the tournament, when he was present at the Midwest regional championship game in Dallas and the national semifinals and final in Charlotte, North Carolina.

The use of combined shot clocks/game clocks was required at all sites.

The committee agreed to attempt to assign the top four seeds in each region away from a site that may create a "home-crowd advantage" for their opponents. The committee recognized that it could be necessary to move lower-seeded teams from their natural regions in order to accomplish this.

The weighing of the three factors composing the Rating Percentage Index (RPI), Division I winning percentage, opponents' winning percentage and opponents' opponent's winning percentage, was adjusted from 20-40-40 to 25-50-25. Factor IV was introduced to produce an adjusted RPI. It was based on a team's "good" wins, "bad" losses and nonconference scheduling.

1995 The existing CBS Sports contract was replaced with a new agreement for $1.725 billion extending through the 2002 championship.

1996 The NCAA created the first online computer page for the men's Final Four.

Pool reporters were permitted under specified conditions to interview game officials after games.

Participating institutions' seating locations were moved closer to midcourt and nearer to the playing floor.

1997 Bracketing policies were changed so that once the highest-seeded team from a conference is assigned to a region, only the eighth team selected from that conference may be placed in that region.

The NCAA's online computer page was expanded to include preliminary rounds.

1998 Competition at all three sites within each region began being conducted on the same days of the week and tournament hosts' teams were permitted to play on the days they are hosting.

The name of the Southeast Region was changed to the South Region.

The basketball committee continued selecting Final Four host facilities with a minimum seating capacity of 30,000, when it picked New Orleans, San Antonio, St. Louis, Indianapolis and Atlanta to host from 2003 to 2007.

1999 Bracketing policies were changed so that, once the highest-seeded team from a conference is assigned to a region, only the sixth team from that conference may be placed in that region.

The NCAA signed a new 11-year agreement with CBS Sports, commencing with the 2003 championship. The agreement, which was for a minimum of $6 billion, included rights to television (over-the-air, cable, satellite, digital and home video), marketing, game programs, radio, Internet, fan festivals and licensing (excluding concessionaire agreements).

In its continuing effort to combat the effects of gambling, the committee began conducting background checks on game officials. The NCAA checked 50 officials randomly selected from among the 96 who worked the previous year's tournament.

2000 The NCAA and the Illinois High School Association formed the "March Madness Athletic Association" and applied for trademark registration for the term "March Madness." The registration was granted in 2001.

2001 Inasmuch as 31 conferences were eligible for automatic qualification, the committee agreed to conduct an opening-round game the Tuesday before the first/second rounds, pitting teams seeded Nos. 64 and 65.

The National Network (TNN) telecast the opening-round game.

For the first time, the NCAA registered a trademark for the term "Big Dance," with a stated first use of 2000.

2002 Championship-, first- and second-round sites were no longer assigned to specific regions. Rather, the committee had the flexibility to assign four-team pods to sites near the teams' natural geographic areas, if possible.

The committee eliminated the bracketing provision that, once the highest-seeded team from a conference was assigned to a region, only the sixth team from that conference could be placed in that region.

CBS expanded its live selection show to one hour.

ESPN televised the opening-round game for the first time.

First-/second-round sites in non-domed stadiums drew 99.5 percent of capacity, an all-time record at the time.

During the selection meeting, for the first time, each committee member had the use of an individual computer for researching and evaluating teams.

2003 Westwood One assumed administration of the tournament's radio rights.

The committee set the minimum Final Four seating capacity at 40,000 and picked San Antonio, Detroit, Indianapolis and Houston to host from 2008 to 2011.

2004 Rather than using the traditional annual rotation of Final Four semifinals pairings (i.e., West vs. East, South vs. Midwest), the committee assigned the pairings during selection weekend. The top No. 1 seed's region was assigned to meet the fourth No. 1 seed's region and the second No. 1 seed's region met the third No. 1 seed's region.

Directional regional site designations (i.e., East, South, Midwest, West) were dropped. Instead, regional sites were known by the city in which the games were played (e.g., Atlanta regional).

2005 Culminating a four-year study, the committee revised the RPI formula to give additional weight to playing on the road. The new formula weighed road victories and home losses at 1.4; home victories and road losses at .6; and neutral-site victories and losses at 1.0. The new weighting system affected only Factor I of the RPI. Factor IV was eliminated.

CBS began a two-year deal with CSTV.com for exclusive Internet video streaming rights for out-of-market game coverage of the first 58 games of the tournament.

The committee revised the bracketing principles to permit two teams from the same conference to meet each other before the regional final if the conference had more than eight teams selected for the championship.

Attendance at first-/second-round and regional sites was 98.4 percent of the facilities' capacity, an all-time record. Arenas other than domes were filled to 99.9 percent of capacity, also a record.

2006 The official RPI was released to the public for the first time February 1, 2006, when the Rating Percentage Index appeared on the NCAA website: ncaasports.com.

The committee revised the bracketing principles so that if it is unable to reconcile the bracket after exhausting all possible options, it has the flexibility to permit two teams from the same conference to meet each other after the first round, if the conference has more than five participants.

2007 The committee returned to geographical regional site designations rather than identifying the sites by the host city, as it did from 2004-06. Regional sites were referred to as East, South, Midwest and West, rather than East Rutherford, San Antonio, St. Louis and San Jose.

In response to tremendous traffic resulting in 19 million video streams and five million visits in 2006, CBS Sportsline doubled its bandwidth capacity for March Madness on Demand, which offers free live Internet streams of each game of the first three rounds of the championship.

CSTV's coverage was expanded to include live broadcasts of two first-round games, pregame and postgame previews and recaps on all competition dates, and video streaming of postgame press conferences that are archived at www.ncaasports.com. In addition, CSTV aired live programming during open practice day at the Final Four, aired a National Championship Pregame Show live from the Georgia Dome, and provided coverage to ancillary events such as Hoop City, My CokeFest and The Big Dance at Centennial Olympic Park.

2008 For the first time in tournament history, all four No. 1 seeds advanced to the Final Four.

The continuing growth in popularity for ancillary events was on display as Hoop City set an all-time attendance record with more than 63,000 visitors during a four-day period, while The Big Dance attracted 167,000 people to the streets of San Antonio. For the first time, the NABC College All-Star Game was held at the same venue as the Final Four. The game attracted 4,800 fans to the Alamodome.

CBS Sports.com and March Madness on Demand launched a developer platform that allowed more than 200 websites to carry live video of the championship online, including sites such as ESPN.com, Yahoo, Sl.com, YouTube and Facebook. CBS allowed users to watch all 63 games that it telecast during the tournament for the first time, and saw the total number of unique visitors from first-round games through the regional championship games escalate from 1.75 million to 4.33 million.

The committee selected New Orleans, Atlanta, North Texas, Indianapolis and Houston to host Final Fours from 2012 to 2016.

2009 The category of "last 12 games" was eliminated from the official criteria for tournament selection.

For the first time, a U.S. president filled out his bracket on national television as President Barack Obama explained his picks to ESPN's Andy Katz. Obama picked the correct winner with North Carolina.

The Big East Conference became the first league to have three teams seeded No. 1 and the first to send five teams to the Sweet 16.

Basketball legends Earvin "Magic" Johnson and Larry Bird marked the 30th anniversary of the 1979 title game between Michigan State and Indiana State by presenting the game ball before the national championship game.

While usually performed by one of the school bands, for the first time the national anthem was sung by national entertainers at the Final Four: The Temptations.

For the first time, students from each of the Final Four teams could sit at court level. More than 400 students from each school were able to buy seats located behind the basket for less than $7 a game and could stand and cheer throughout the games without obstructing the view of other spectators.

In Detroit, record crowds attended the Final Four games (145,378), Hoop City (76,000) and The Big Dance (300,000). More than 1,700 participated in the 5K Run/Walk and another 4,000 were part of the Final Four Dribble.

The Final Four telecasts by CBS were distributed to 153 countries around the world and shown on the Armed Forces Network. With Westwood One Radio, the Armed Forces Radio Network, Sirius/XM satellite radio and NCAA online, the games were heard in 170 countries and 150 ships at sea.

2010 The NCAA announced it would exercise a clause in its contract with CBS, signed in 1999, to opt out of the deal in order to sign a new 14-year, $10.8 billion deal with CBS Sports and Turner Broadcasting. The television, Internet and wireless rights agreement also called for CBS and Turner to collaborate on the NCAA's corporate marketing program. In addition, all tournament games were shown live across the country (on CBS, TBS, TNT and truTV), which was a first in the championship's history. The new agreement included an expansion of the tournament field to 68 teams in 2011. It was the first expansion since the field went from 64 to 65 teams in 2001. A revamped Bracket Town (formerly known as Hoop City) was a five-day fan fest that attracted nearly 53,000 people.

In 2009, President Barack Obama became the first president to fill out the NCAA tournament bracket on television. Obama correctly picked the eventual champion North Carolina Tar Heels as he explained his picks to ESPN's Andy Katz.

Indianapolis-based Butler became the seventh school to advance to the Final Four being hosted in its own city. The games were played in Lucas Oil Stadium. NCAA rules prohibit live animals to be present during tournament games, but Butler's mascot bulldog, Blue II, was granted a special exemption and allowed to attend the festivities. Blue II attended the next year also when Butler advanced to the 2011 Final Four in Houston.

2011 Online and mobile viewers were treated to added features that enhanced the viewing experience. For the first time, March Madness on Demand (MMOD) was available free to iPad and iPhone users in addition to online via NCAA.com. Despite the increased availability of games on TV, total visits to MMOD platforms, including broadband and mobile, were up 63 percent. In addition, more than 13.7 million total hours of streaming video was consumed through the MMOD broadband application and iPad and iPhone apps.

The newly expanded field of 68 teams featured four first-round games, two of which included the last four teams of the overall seed list (Nos. 65-68). The other two games pitted the last four at-large teams selected to the field against each other. It marked the first time in tournament history that the final at-large teams were revealed to the public. The four games constituted the first round of the championship and were branded as the First Four. Games formerly considered first- and second-round games were changed to second- and third-round games.

VCU, a No. 11 seed and a team the Division I Men's Basketball Committee was criticized for selecting as an at-large team, made history by playing in the inaugural First Four and then advancing to the school's first Final Four by winning five straight games. The Rams became the first team to play six games and not play in the title game.

Cincinnati and UConn become the first schools from the same conference to play each before the tournament regionals. UConn won the Big East showdown in the third round and went on to win the NCAA championship.

All 68 teams in the tournament earned a unit in the Basketball Fund, with each advancing institution earning an additional unit leading up to the Final Four.

2012 Working with television partners from Turner and CBS, the Division I Men's Basketball Committee decided that teams advancing from the First Four would be exempt from playing the first game of the first session at a second-round site.

The committee's ranking of the 68 tournament teams, commonly known as the overall seed list, was revealed publicly for the first time.

The Super 10 Fan Selection Committee consisted of contest winners from entrants who submitted videos via the March Madness Facebook page. Winners were flown to Atlanta and spent three days in deliberations regarding the tournament field during the actual selection weekend. The fan committee had access to Nitty Gritty reports and team sheets, which for the first time were released to the public each week during the season.

1,566 media members were credentialed for the Final Four, the most ever.

Games were broadcast internationally via ESPN International to more than 200 countries across the globe. These include Australia, Brazil, Canada, China, Egypt, France, Germany, Greece, India, Israel, Italy, Japan, Mexico, New Zealand, Russia, Saudi Arabia, South Africa, South Korea and Spain.

In addition to its national and global telecast and online availability via March Madness Live, the Final Four had the potential to be viewed by approximately one million U.S. Armed Forces, Department of Defense civilian employees and their families stationed overseas and aboard 140 U.S. Navy ships at sea via the American Armed Forces Radio Network.

President Barack Obama and British Prime Minister David Cameron attended the First Four in Dayton.

2013 In the 2012 Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade, the NCAA had a float for the first time that officially kicked off the 75th Celebration of March Madness. The float featured Kareem Abdul-Jabbar (Lew Alcindor), David Thompson and Christian Laettner.

Louisville captured its first national championship since 1986 as Luke Hancock became the first non-starter in tournament history to earn Most Outstanding Player honors. Louisville was also inspired by Kevin Ware, who despite suffering a broken leg in the Cardinals' victory over Duke in the regional final in Indianapolis, accompanied his team on the trip to Atlanta for the Final Four. Rick Pitino became the first coach to win championships at two different schools, having previously won a championship at Kentucky.

For the first time in history, the Division II and Division III championship games were played in the same city as the Final Four. More than 6,200 fans watched Amherst defeat Mary Hardin-Baylor in the Division III game, and then better than 7,700 watched Drury rally to beat Metro State in the Division II game. The games were played at Philips Arena in downtown Atlanta.

Wichita State became the first Missouri Valley Conference school to advance to the Final Four since the 1979 Indiana State team led by Larry Bird.

The NCAA celebrated 75 years of March Madness, culminating with the selection of the top 15 players, the top team and top moment in tournament history, as chosen by fan voting on NCAA.com and a panel of experts that included former committee members, the NABC and USBWA.

The NCAA created additional courtside seating for fans at all rounds of the championship, providing fans of the participating teams, specifically family and friends of the coaches and student-athletes, seats closer to the court. Military personnel were also provided with better seats, while other fans were afforded the opportunity to purchase premium seating.

Before 2013, there were only six instances of a No. 15 seed defeating a No. 2 seed, including two in 2012. In 2013, Florida Gulf Coast made its first tournament appearance a memorable one. The Eagles stunned Georgetown and San Diego State to become the first 15-seed to reach the Sweet 16.

For the fourth time in five years, there were 10 occurrences of a lower-seeded team defeating a higher-seeded team in the round of 64. In addition to Florida Gulf Coast's win, one 14-seed, a 13, three 12s, an 11-seed, a 10 and two No. 9s advanced to the third round. Since the field expanded to 64 teams in 1985, the 2013 tournament marked only the second time that at least one team seeded 9th, 10th, 11th, 12th, 13th, 14th and 15th won a tournament game. The other year was 1991.

2014 The new principles allow for teams from the same conference to meet as early as the round of 32 if they only played each other once during the season, to include the conference tournament. If the teams played twice, they may not meet until the Sweet 16, and if they played three times, they may not play until the regional final. In addition, the top four teams from a conference shall be in separate regions, if they are seeded on the first four lines (top 16 seeds).

Connecticut won its fourth national title -- all since 1999 -- by becoming the first seventh-seeded team to capture the championship. Led by Most Outstanding Player Shabaaz Napier, the Huskies escaped Saint Joseph's in the round of 64, winning in overtime. UConn then upset second-seeded Villanova to get to the Sweet 16, where it knocked off third-seeded Iowa St. and fourth-seeded Michigan St. to win the East Regional and reach the Final Four. In the national semifinals, the Huskies rallied from an early 12-point deficit to beat Florida, the tournament's overall top seed. Connecticut never trailed in the title game, holding off Kentucky, 60-54 to give former player Kevin Ollie a championship in his first tournament as UConn's head coach.

UConn was a No. 7 seed in the East Regional, while Kentucky was the No. 8 seed in the Midwest. The combined seed total (15) for the championship game was the highest in tournament history, easily breaking the record of 11 when third-seeded Connecticut beat No. 8 Butler in the 2011 championship game.

The two-session North Texas Final Four attendance totaled 158,682 fans in AT&T Stadium, setting the record for the highest ever attendance and surpassing the 2013 Final Four in Atlanta by 9,006 fans. This year marked the highest attended national championship game with 79,238 fans, exceeding the previous record, also Atlanta in 2013, by 4,912 fans. It also marks the highest attended semifinals in tournament history with 79,444 fans, besting the previous record from the 2011 Final Four at Reliant Stadium in Houston by 4,023 fans. In total, 739,189 fans attended the 36 sessions of the 2014 Division I Men's Basketball tournament.

A record-breaking 1,829 media credentials were issued for the Final Four.

For the first time, the national semifinals were carried on cable television as Turner's TBS Network carried Saturday's Final Four games. The two games (Kentucky-Wisconsin and Connecticut-Florida) were the two most viewed college basketball games in cable television history, with 16.3 million watching the second game (Kentucky edging Wisconsin) and 11.7 watching the first game. Nearly 40 million people watched CBS's telecast of the national championship game.

In addition to the record-breaking television audience, more people tuned in using NCAA March Madness Live. Across online and mobile (tablets and smart phones) platforms, the two semifinal games netted 3.8 million live streams for an increase of 76 percent over last year. The doubleheader also combined to register more than one million hours of live video consumed, up 37 percent over 2013. Over the course of the tournament, 9.9 million unique viewers (up 9 percent from 2013) streamed 70 million live video streams (up 42 percent from 2013). A total of 15.1 million live hours were watched (up 7 percent from 2013). The NCAA March Madness Live app was downloaded more than 4.5 million times. According to Social Guide, the National Semifinals tallied more than 1.8 million tweets -- that were seen by nearly 200 million followers -- for a 36 percent increase over last year. NCAA Final Four social media accounts saw a 39 percent growth in social media audience to approximately 1.3 million people, and recorded approximately 43.2 million impressions during the entire Final Four, including the national championship game.

National 3d-place games did not start until 1946 and ended in 1981; in other years, two teams tied for third and both are listed in this column. RR-Regional runner-up, or one victory from Final Four, thus in the top eight.

# NOTES ON TEAMS AND COACHES:

MICHIGAN: Steve Fisher coached Michigan in the 1989 tournament; Bill Freider was the coach during the regular season.

MISSOURI: Rich Daly coached Missouri in the 1989 tournament due to Norm Stewart's illness; Missouri credits the entire 1989 season to Stewart.

PRINCETON: Jake McCandless coached Princeton in the 1961 tournament; Franklin Cappon suffered a heart attack 11 games into the season; Princeton credits the 1961 regular season to Cappon and the postseason to McCandless.

SEATTLE: Clair Markey coached Seattle in the 1963 tournament due to Vince Cazetta's resignation.
