NATIONAL COLLEGIATE

Highlights

Kentucky edges West Virginia by three points for its first national title: Behind gritty performances from veterans Heather Greathouse and Ethan Settlemares, the Kentucky rifle team won the overall national title at the 2010-11 NCAA championships hosted by Columbus State.

After the Wildcats won the smallbore NCAA title March 11 in the first day of competition, the Wildcats held off West Virginia's charge in air rifle March 12 to secure the first national championship in program history, finishing with a 4,700 team total score.

Kentucky entered the final day of competition owning a seven-point lead. Kentucky claimed its first-ever NCAA championship in smallbore on March 11 totaling a 2,336 team score, led by Settlemares and Greathouse. Settlemares won the NCAA individual championship on Friday with a 691 in smallbore, becoming the first individual NCAA champion in smallbore in program history.

Since the 1994 season, the Wildcats have finished among the top 10 teams at the national championships a total of 16 times. Kentucky owned four runner-up finishes and four third-place finishes since 1994 entering the final day, including a fourth-place finish in 2010.

In claiming the 2011 national championship, the Wildcats have completed a historic season, including an unbeaten regular-season slate in the Great American Rifle Conference Championships.

"I am so proud of this team," Kentucky head coach Harry Mullins said. "This was our goal from Day One, to have a chance to shoot a 4,700 as a team. We knew if we did that we would be right there at the end. It is a tremendous honor to come out on top among such a great group of teams and shooters. We have had a magical season and it is surreal to be standing here at the end of the year as the national champion."

After the Wildcats got off to a tremendous start March 11 behind Greathouse's 587 on the first relay in smallbore, the Wildcats again sent Greathouse in the first relay in air rifle, a change from the typical routine throughout the season. Greathouse responded under the pressure, putting up a 591 to set the tone for the Wildcats' final day of competition. Freshman Emily Holsopple contributed a 589, with Henri Junghanel charting a team-high 594.

West Virginia continued to push, using a 599 (out of 600 points possible) from world champion Nicco Campriani in the final relay in air rifle to narrow the Kentucky lead. Settlemares fired a 590 in a pressure-laden situation on the final relay to push the Wildcats over the hump and claim the national title.

Kentucky's 4,700 team score was three points better than the Mountaineers, with West Virginia winning the air rifle national title with a 2,368 on the final day. TCU, the 2010 NCAA champion, finished third with a 4,664 total team score. Jacksonville State (4,650), Murray State (4,634), Alaska-Fairbanks (4,634), Navy (4,609) and Army (4,596) rounded out the eight-team field.

On March 11, the smallbore portion of the match was held at Fort Benning, and on March 12, Columbus State hosted the air rifle portion on campus at the Frank G. Lumpkin Jr. Center.
