2018 CHAMPIONSHIP

HIGHLIGHTS

Denver wins program's 24th national title It all came to the final day of skiing, but the Denver ski team secured its 24th NCAA national championship, behind 167 points in the Nordic freestyle.

Denver held a 26-point lead going into the fourth and final day of the championships and pulled away from Colorado to win its third title in the last five years. The Pioneers scored 604 points, the most in the five seasons at a NCAA Championship in the current scoring format that went into effect in 2014.

Dartmouth senior Brian McLaughlin became the first Big Green skier in 19 years to win the NCAA title in the giant slalom. He edged out his teammate Tanguy Nef by less than two tenths of a second

On the women's side, Denver's Amelia Smart won the giant slalom title by the narrowest of margins. The top three skiers were separated by just 0.06 seconds with Smart taking the gold with her combined time of 1:53.21, New Mexico's Katharine Irwin the silver (1:53.25) and Vermont's Paula Moltzan the bronze (1:53.27).

Smart won her second national title of the year in the women's slalom beating out Vermont's Paula Moltzan by half of a second.

Dartmouth got their first women's individual title of the championships with Katharine Ogden in the 5k classical run. She dominated the field, beating out the runner-up by almost a full minute. Ogden also went on to win the women's 15k freestyle title by almost 40 seconds.

In the men's 10k classical race, Utah earned its first individual champion of the year with Martin Bergstrom. Bergstrom's dominate performance was good enough to beat Colorado's Petter Reistad by eight seconds.

Although Tanguy Nef was edged out by his teammate in the men's giant slalom, he was able to bounce back and win the men's slalom national title. He just managed to out race Vermont's Sandy Vietze by seven tenths of a second.

On the final day, Northern Michigan gained an individual title in the men's 20k freestyle with Ian Torchia. Torchia was two seconds faster than the runner-up from Colorado, Alvar Alex.
