Washington's victory in I Eights lifted the Huskies to their third NCAA title.

2001 Championships

Highlights

Familiar Waters: Washington returned to the site of previous crew success and captured its third NCAA title in dramatic fashion May 26 on Lake Lanier near Gainesville, Georgia. The Huskies rallied past upset-minded Michigan and staved off defending champion Brown with a pair of wins in the three grand final events.

Washington's title was its first since 1998, the last time the NCAA championships were held on Lake Lanier.

The Huskies, top seeded from the West Region, clinched the title by clipping their two rowing rivals in I Eights. In the championship's five-year history, the I Eights winner has claimed every team trophy.

Trailing Michigan by one point heading into the race, Washington jumped into the lead over the course's first 500 meters despite a strong headwind. Brown then nudged ahead at the 1,000- and 1,500-meter posts, leading by as much as half a length. But the Huskies rallied with a furious finish.

Brown finished second in that race and third overall to end a two-year reign as team champion.
