2016 CHAMPIONSHIP

HIGHLIGHTS

Denison bests rival Kenyon for championship: Denison stood on one side of the pool at the Greensboro Aquatic Center, directly across from Kenyon.

There was no way for one to hide from the other, and it had been like that at the NCAA Division III men's swimming and diving national championship. Back and forth they went for the team lead. Wednesday, it was Denison. Thursday, Kenyon. Friday, the advantage was back to Denison. Thirty-three points separated the two schools, a fairly comfortable margin, but not insurmountable. On Saturday, the final day, Denison maintained the top spot and scored its magical national championship.

"Kenyon and Denison have been conference rivals for a long, long time and national rivals for a while, too," Parini said. "I think both teams tend to bring out the best in each other. I think our close proximity tends to foster great competition and great performances. It's special whenever they're in the pool for us.

"Any national championship is terrific," he continued. "We didn't just beat Kenyon. We beat a lot of good teams. There's a lot of great swimming in Division III. We had to go through a lot of great schools to win the title."

As the final men's event wound down, however, it would have been impossible to guess that Parini's squad had already clinched the crown. Seeded first in the men's 400 freestyle relay, the Big Red could manage only a fourth-place finish.

"We had a terrific fourth-day morning, and we set ourselves up for a good night," Parini said. "We maybe didn't finish quite as well as we would've liked to tonight. I think we let down maybe just a little bit, but it's not always winning the battles. It's winning the war. I think in this case, we did that."

What Denison also did was maintain its status as the only other team besides Kenyon to win the DIII national championship in the last three-and-a-half decades. Since 1980, the Lords have won every single DIII national championship. Except for two, in 2011 and 2012, when Denison captured the national championship.
