2017 CHAMPIONSHIP

HIGHLIGHTS

Emory sweeps men's and women's national championships: Emory University became just the second institution in Division III history, and the first since 2009, to sweep both the men's and women's swimming and diving championships as the Eagles led from start to finish to take home both team titles Saturday at the Conroe ISD. Kenyon College swept both team championships 23 different times.

On the men's side, Emory earned the program's first-ever team title on the back of four relay wins and a historic individual performance by senior Andrew Wilson.

The Eagles finished with 438 points, holding off both Kenyon with 384 points and defending champion Denison who finished with 371 points. Johns Hopkins finished fourth with 295 points.

Wilson wrapped up his career and one-man assault on the NCAA record book by going three-for-three in national title swims while posting the fastest times in NCAA Division III history for each swim. He won the 200 IM on Wednesday, the 100 breast on Friday and the 200 breast on Saturday evening where he touched first in a time of 1:50.80 – shattering the meet and championship records that he had set in 2015 and 2016, respectively. Ian Reardon of Kenyon was second in 1:58.04 and Michael Lagieski of Washington (Mo.) finished third in 1:58.51.

In the final event of the championship – the men's 400 free relay – Emory picked up its fourth relay title of the meet as the team of Trey Kolleck, Alex Hardwick, Hayes Burdette-Sapp and Oliver Smith touched first in a time of 2:56.68. The victory also gave the program consecutive wins in the 400 free relay – the first time a program has produced consecutive wins in the event since Kenyon in 2012 and 2013. Denison was second in 2:57.11 and MIT was third in 2:58.77.

In other men's action on Saturday, Ben Lin of Williams made it a 200 back sweep for the Ephs as he took the title with a finishing time of 1:44.00. It was the third individual national title for Lin (100 fly and 100 back) at this year's meet and the fourth of his career. He is the 13th man in NCAA Division III history to win both the 100 and 200 back at a single championship meet and the first since 2012. Jackson Lindell of Denison, the defending national champion in the event, placed second with a time of 1:45.32 and Kingsley Bowen of Tufts was third in 1:46.33.

Kenyon's Arthur Conover earned his second national title of the 2017 championships with a victory in the 1650 free. The sophomore finished in a time of 14:59.56, which set a new meet record. It is his third overall national title as he also won the 1650 in 2015. Andrew Greenhalgh, the defending national champion in the event, finished second this year with a time of 15:02.34. Emory's Thomas Gordon was third in 15:12.80.

Jesse Novak of Rowan earned a national title in the 100 free, touching first in a time of 43.29. It was his first championship swim of 2017 but the third of his career after claiming titles in the 50 and 100 free in 2015. Keene State's Ryan Boraski was second in 43.43 and Oliver Smith of Emory was third in 43.78.

Max Levy of Denison wrapped up his career with a victory on the 1-meter board, posting a winning score of 588.20. The win completed the meet sweep of both boards for the eight-time all-American and represented his fourth career diving victory. He also swept both boards in 2015 – the last the championship was held in Shenandoah. Connor Brisson of NYU finished second with a score of 577.50 and Arron Carlson of SUNY-Fredonia was third with a score of 547.35.

In the ceremony that followed the awarding of the team trophies, Levy was named the Male Diver-of-the-Year while his coach, Russ Betran, was honored as CSCAA Men's Diving Coach-of-the-Year. Emory's Wilson was named the named Male Swimmer-of-the-Year while his coach, Jon Howell, was selected CSCAA Men's Coach-of-the-Year.
