2018 CHAMPIONSHIP

HIGHLIGHTS

Denison captured the 2018 DIII Men's Swimming and Diving title at the IU Natatorium in Indianapolis: The Big Red accumulated 569.5 points to put them on the top of the podium ahead of Emory (369.5), Kenyon (322), Johns Hopkins (287), and MIT (252). The title is the school's fourth national championship for the men's program.

On the first day, Emory's Thomas Gordon earned the first-place spot for 500 free with a time of 4:23.70. However, Denison placed three swimmers in the top-10 of the event, allowing them to gain a good amount of momentum.

In the second event of the first day, the 200 individual medley, NYU's Ian Rainey swam a 1:46.94, making his mark as the first men's swimming national champion in program history. Denison continued to feed its lead with swimmers Robert Wang (1:47.50) and Robert Williams (1:50.15) placing third and seventh, respectively.

In the 3-meter diving event, Heath Ogawa scored a 573.60 to earn points for Lake Forest and his first national title.

Emory took over in relays on day two. The Eagles cohort made up of Sage Ono, Trey Kolleck, Aaron Schwartz and Oliver Smith topped the competition making a 1:18.61 mark to dominate in the 200 free relay. In the 400 medley relay, Ono, Cooper Tollen, Smith and Kolleck a time of 3:13.97 earned the Eagles the top slot for five national titles after two days.

Denison sophomore Kymani Senior swam the 100 fly in 48.03 to push the Red Devil's closer to a title. Rainey earned another national title for NYU, the second for himself and the program, swimming a 3:47.77 in the 400 individual medley.

The third day of the championships didn't skimp out on history-making wins.

SUNY New Paltz swimmer, Cooper Knapp, earned the first national title since 1994 for the Hawks in his 1:46.45 200 fly.

Lukas Ming Menkhoff of Pomona-Pitzer became the first swimmer, for both men's and women's, to earn a national title. Menkhoff earned himself a program record besting 53.39 after controlling the lead for a majority of the 100 back. SUNY Geneseo senior Samuel Randall ended his career with a national title on the one meter diving board, tallying a score of 527.00. The win was Randall's second career national championship.

The Big Red won their third-straight 800 free relay swimming it in 6:29.59, to conclude day three of the championships. The win marked the programs 100th event national championship in Denison swimming & diving history.

On the final day, Denison carried a hefty lead on Emory and company. They boasted a 202.5-point lead going into day four. Emory earned a national championship in three out of the five events held. However, it was not enough to close the gap Denison had amassed.

In the 1,650 free, Emory junior Thomas Gordon swam a speedy 15:15.60 in an attempt to close the gap. He was trailed by two Big Red swimmers, Matthew Hedman (15:17.29) and James Baker (15:31.35). Smith of Emory swam a stunning 43.32 in the 100 free only to be trailed by Tufts' Roger Gu and Loras' Isaac Casey, who swam a 43.44 and 44.08, respectively.

Both Gordon and Smith earned their second national championship of the 2018 meet with these wins. Denison's Robert Wang swam the 200 back in 1:45.37 to make up for the lost points in the previous two events. DePauw seized their first national championship of the meet in the 200 breast with senior Sam McManus. McManus became just the fifth Tiger to earn a national championship in the history of athletics, the most recent being in 2007.

The final event title, the 400 free relay, was grasped by Emory with a time of 2:56.72 by Sage, Kolleck, Schwartz, and Smith.
