2017 CHAMPIONSHIPS

HIGHLIGHTS

New Mexico Wins NCAA Title For Second Time In Three Years: For the second time in the last three years, the Lobo women's cross country team won the national title at the NCAA Division I Cross Country Championships in Louisville, relying on a dominant performance by individual winner Ednah Kurgat for its second team title ever.

Behind Kurgat's meet-record victory (19:19.5) over the six-kilometer course, the second-ranked New Mexico women placed four scorers in the top 15 en route to becoming the ninth team in NCAA history to win multiple national titles in women's cross country.

It was also the team's eighth-straight top-10 performance at the NCAA Championships — the longest active streak in NCAA history — and the team's third top-three showing in the last four years.

Winning for the fifth time this season in as many tries, Kurgat ran up near the front of the 255-runner field from virtually the start, eventually taking over about two kilometers in. Washington's Amy-Eloise Neale was second (19:27).

Kurgat's time is the fastest in championship history since the NCAA moved the race distance up from 5,000 meters in 2000. She also recorded the largest margin of victory, 7.51 seconds, since 2014.

As it's been all season, Kurgat was quickly joined at the finish line by her teammates, with three other Lobos finishing in the top 15.

Weini Kelati placed seventh overall with a time of 19:35.77, while Charlotte Prouse took 12th (19:48.93) and Alice Wright finished 14th (19:49.73).

All four earned All-American honors (which are given to the top 40 finishers), giving the team 18 All-American plaudits since their streak of top-10 team finishes started in 2010.

For Wright, she earned her fourth career All-American nod in cross country, becoming the first female runner in Division I to earn the honor in four straight years since 2010-2013.

In a field where every second and every place counted, New Mexico's title hopes relied significantly on the performance of its No. 5 runner.

Alondra Negrón Texidor didn't let her team down, scoring via her 85th-place time 20:36.67.

As a team, New Mexico tallied 90 points, besting No. 3 ranked San Francisco (105 points) and No. 1 ranked Colorado (139) in the low-score-wins format.
