NATIONAL COLLEGIATE WOMEN'S

Highlights

Southern California Takes Championship Over Stanford, 10-9: Southern California coach Jovan Vavic was still soggy from the celebratory dip in the pool after his team's 10-9 NCAA women's water polo championship-clinching defeat of Stanford May 16.

He was also all smiles with Women of Troy seniors Tumua Anae and Kally Lucas on either side of him.

"When you're a coach for so many years, you think it's going to get old," he said. "But I'm as excited about this finish, this championship as [2004]. It doesn't get old. In fact, in some ways I was more excited for this one because we waited so long."

Past frustrations were exorcised at the San Diego State University Aztec Aquaplex in a defeat of top-seeded Stanford that came down literally to the final play. Despite leading through three periods, Southern California had to hold off a Stanford rally that nearly bridged a four-goal gap.

Annika Dries' goal with 45 seconds remaining brought Stanford within one for the first time since early in the third period, and capped a torrid, 1-minute, 40-second sprint. With momentum decidedly on Stanford's side and less than a minute separating Southern California from the championship it had been denied in the previous two title games, the Women of Troy regrouped.

"With 45 seconds left, we were all in the center of the pool saying, 'This is the best defense of our lives,'" said Lucas. "And we got our stop. It's something special; win by four, win by one, it feels great either way."

This was not unfamiliar territory for either squad. The Cardinal and Women of Troy last met April 24 in a match that featured a Stanford rally and eventual overtime win.

That contest was for the Mountain Pacific Sports Federation championship.

"It played out exactly as our other games did, where they came out with a lot of energy, executed and got out to a lead," said Stanford coach John Tanner. "It was eerily similar to our other games. We came back chipping away. We got great looks, but didn't convert. We were spending a lot of energy to get back in it."

Southern California was able to build that lead thanks to a potent power-play attack. The Women of Troy converted on four such opportunities in the first half, and tacked on another in the fourth period.

As successful as Southern California was offensively on the power play, however, Vavic credited his team's defense against the power play as key.

"Our five-on-six defense was great. It saved us today, in fact," he said.

Stanford was only able to capitalize on two power-play opportunities, but the Cardinal remained within striking distance thanks to its penalty shooting. Senior Kelly Eaton scored on all four of her penalty chances.

While Eaton carried a bulk of the load for Stanford, Southern California spread the scoring wealth through seven different players. Lucas, Patricia Jancso and Kristen Dronberger were multiple goal scorers, each providing two.

Lucas had the final score, moments after Kami Craig put Southern California ahead, 9-6, on a goal she followed with a spirited celebration.

It was one example of an especially fired-up Women of Troy squad.

"It was the most passionate water polo game I've ever played," said Anae, a dynamo in the cage the final game, who followed up one crucial save with a wag of the finger.

"I was surprised. Pleasantly surprised," laughed Vavic.

Cheering on its team's energetic play was a noisy Southern California contingent. Members of the university's band and cheerleaders were in attendance.

"With the band and our family and friends, I'd say we brought our home pool to San Diego," Anae said.

And with the championship wrapped up, the team from Los Angeles left its mark in San Diego.
